Language Learning in Higher Education (LLHE): the Journal of CercleS

Language Learning in Higher Education (LLHE) is the Journal of CercleS, the European Confederation of Language Centres in Higher Education. The journal deals with the most relevant aspects of language acquisition within the university context. It focuses on the outcomes of research on language teaching, blended learning, autonomous learning, and language assessment, and discusses aspects of professional development, quality assurance and university language policy. Its primary aim is to both disseminate the results of research activities carried out at University Language Centres and Higher Education Departments, as well as to give the opportunity to share ideas among professionals involved in language and linguistic studies. This aim carries the long-term objective to help increase the quality of language learning and of the many learning and teaching actions offered by the higher education language community throughout the European context and beyond.

All articles are subjected to a double-blind peer review process.
